

Finally, by maintaining our foreign assistance program for sustainable development and humanitarian purposes, this legislation commits us not only to economic liberalization in Africa, but also to equitable and efficient development that does not overlook the poor or those most in need.

Mr. Chairman, I find it very hard to imagine how someone could oppose this legislation once they have examined it. This legislation has received widespread attention both inside the United States and outside this country from our allies and friends. Ask the African countries and their leaders and their people how they feel about it. If they know about it, they are in favor of it. It has been received well as a coordinated, thoughtful component to our foreign policy toward the individual countries of Africa.

I say to my colleagues who know about my involvement in Africa and foreign affairs issues for some time, I say to them, this legislation is a very positive contribution to Africa and to the United States. I strongly urge that my colleagues support the most important foreign policy initiative of this Congress, one that has bipartisan support.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON), in recognition of the gentleman's strong concerns about this issue and that it is his birthday, even though he is going to speak in opposition.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Let me first thank the gentleman from California (Mr. ROYCE) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) for this opportunity. I want to thank all of my colleagues for their participation in this discussion which I suspect will be a fruitful debate.

This is an historic day as this Congress discusses and debates U.S. trade with Africa on the House floor. As my colleague noted, I was born on March 11, 1965, and on December 12, 1995, I was elected to Congress as the 91st African-American to serve in this House. There have only been 102 African-Americans elected to Congress out of a total of 11,541 Americans. Ninety-eight have been in the House, 4 elected to the Senate and 2 this last century, including 2 this century, CAROL MOSELEY-BRAUN, the only African-American woman to ever serve in the Senate.

This occasion to debate a respectful and reciprocal trade relation with Africa is a test of fate for the 60 million Africans taken from their native shores and forced to make the transatlantic voyage. It is because of that history that we are compelled to strenuously critique and analyze this bill. So I am periodically, Mr. Speaker, going to raise questions of some of my colleagues on the other side and this side that I hope will be taken in the spirit within which we have engaged in this discourse.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee will rise informally in order that the House may receive a message.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER) assumed the chair.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Sherman Williams, one of his secretaries.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Committee will resume its sitting.

AFRICAN GROWTH AND OPPORTUNITY ACT

The Committee resumed its sitting.

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, Africa is a continent on the move and it is time we recognized that fact. We have neglected the people of Africa and ceded many export opportunities to their former European colonial powers.

This legislation will for the first time focus the attention of the U.S. Government on a comprehensive trade strategy towards Africa. This legislation reinforces the positive developments taking place in that continent. Since 1990, more than 25 African countries have held democratic elections and more than 30 countries have embarked on free-market economic reforms.

Let me give my colleagues a taste of what can happen. Last year I held a hearing before the Subcommittee on Small Business Exports, which I chair, on the subject of the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, OPIC. A wonderful lady born in Africa and now residing in Massachusetts, Monique Maddy, testified how her small telecommunications firm was able to contribute both to economic development in Africa and increased U.S. exports to Africa.

She won a deal, thanks to a political risk insurance package from OPIC, to build wireless public telephones which operate on debit cards instead of coins for Tanzania. This contract resulted in the export of $4.5 million worth of goods and services from 8 supplier companies in 7 States: Texas, New Jersey, Washington, Georgia, Missouri, and North Carolina. In addition, 60 jobs were created in Tanzania.

Because the Africa Communications Group did so well with the Tanzania sale, Ms. Maddy subsequently won a larger sale to Ghana with OPIC's help. This will result in the export of approximately $65 million worth of goods and services from the United States and create 500 jobs in Ghana. Without OPIC, most likely these deals would have gone to our European competitors.

My home State of Illinois is another example of the phenomenal growth of exports to Africa. South Africa alone is Illinois's 20th largest export destination, totaling $389 million for 1996. The leading exports to South Africa are industries where Illinois excels: chemical, earth-moving equipment, agricultural machinery, and aviation parts.

From the Chicago-land area, exports to South Africa grew 148 percent between 1993 and 1996, starting at $74 million and increasing to $184 million. In Rockford, Illinois, exports to South Africa grew 29 percent, jumping from $2 million in 1994 to $2.6 million in 1995, the latest date for which we have export statistics.

South Africa is the locomotive that drives much of Sub-Saharan Africa, and it is critically important we help this big emerging market on the path of democratic and free-market reform.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. BERMAN).

(Mr. BERMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

□ 1245

Mr. BERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I join the gentleman in support of H.R. 1432, the African Growth and Opportunity Act. This bill will help sub-Saharan countries build economic self-sufficiency and reduce their isolation in an increasingly interdependent world. The bill supports U.S. aid programs that are vital in the near term, but focus on sustainable development as the only way to substantially boost living standards in some of the world's poorest countries. It promotes trade, foreign investment, debt relief, and private enterprise, including businesses run by women.

At the same time, the bill requires that beneficiary countries have or must be moving towards market-based economies. It requires they be committed to accountable government, the eradication of poverty, observance of human rights: these criteria offer the best chance for prosperity and stability in the region.

The debate today will go into great details on many of the provisions. There will be some amendments which make the bill even better, and others which will be designed to fundamentally gut the key provisions of this bill, but I urge support for the bill and opposition to those amendments, in the context of trying to help H.R. 1432.

Mr. Chairman, opponents of H.R. 1432 say that the United States should not help Sub-Saharan Africa by dropping quotas and tariffs on textiles and apparel, even though these are the goods countries in the region can most readily produce. Opponents argue that reducing trade barriers will make U.S. imports of such goods soar, threatening U.S. textile and apparel manufacturers and workers. They vastly overstate the case.

To address this concern, the Committee on Ways and Means asked the International Trade Commission to assess potential textile and apparel imports from Sub-Saharan Africa under the terms of the bill. The ITC estimated
